Articles

An article is a word that modifies or defines the noun being referenced. In English, there are 3 articles: the, a & an.

The word “the” is used when you’re referring to a specific noun, or with plural nouns.

For example: Please hand me the book.

His mom carried the little kittens to the barn.

Whereas, the word “a” (or an) is used when you’re not referring to a specific noun, but one of a general group.

For example: Please hand me a book.

She wanted a dog.

The word “an” is used when you’re not referring to a specific noun, and the noun (or its modifiers) begins with a vowel or vowel sound.

For example: Please give me an hour.

It became an immigrant haven.

Because the word “hour” begins with a silent ‘h’, the word “an” is used instead of “a”.

Some more examples of articles: The boys wanted to dance with the girls.

The little boy wanted to dance with a little girl.

The little boy wanted to dance with an angel.
